Subject 1: You are upset with your wife for constantly nagging you to find work. You are somewhat intoxicated, and you shoved your wife against a wall, choked her and struck her with your fist. When the police arrive, you have calmed down, but you are verbally uncooperative. You do not want them in your house and you challenge their authority. You do not resist physically in any way.

Subject 2: You are upset with your husband because he doesn't work. He does nothing but drink beer, smoke cigarettes and watch TV all day, everyday. When you got home from work, you began arguing. Your husband became enraged, shoved you against the wall, choked you and then struck you. You did not call the police and you do not know who did. When the police arrive, you let them in but you do not want to tell them what happened. You are otherwise cooperative. Your husband has only struck you once before and promised he would never hit you again. You are afraid if you tell the police what happened, he will leave you.

STUDENT INFORMATION:
